12 October

Hi Frank,

I'd make the first lesson a live test lead, not a screen-share tour after everything is built.

Before any campaign gets real budget, I'd submit one Houston or League City test lead and have your team watch where it lands, what message goes out, which calendar it points to, and what gets reported back. That directly checks the "immediate automated follow-up and appointment booking" part of the job.

It also makes ownership real: your team can see the path inside Vain's accounts, ask why each step exists, and later know what to check when bookings slow down.

Allen