Hi William,

You are not really hiring an editor here. You need the person who owns YouTube strategy, packaging, cadence, scripts, editor direction, and the decisions after CTR, AVD, retention curves, and traffic sources come in.

My plain opinion: this role is risky as a single hire because the job spans strategy, copy, research, creative direction, production management, and performance review.

The page lays out how TGE would cover those outcomes as a done-for-you team for Hairguard, including the first 90 days, pricing, and the fit check.
