Hi Jeff,

I'd use the paid audit to check whether WooCommerce purchase tracking can connect an eligible Meta campaign to a completed store order. That's a useful first check for Southern Aminos because the post makes campaign management conditional on platform eligibility, and the audit is meant to define the initial scope.

If that connection can't be confirmed, I'd agree on a different first measure before setting a conversion target. That keeps the initial readout grounded in what the store can actually track.
