Hi Nasir,

I'd treat the first $1,000 as a gate, not a miniature version of the full $10,000 test.

Before spend, I'd put each of the 20 designer videos into one row with the problem it names, the buyer situation it fits, the page it sends to, and the lead question that proves the person is a real B2B opportunity. If any row can't make that chain clear, I'd fix that piece before launching it.

That matches your cross-industry angle without letting the test reward cheap curiosity.
