Hi Senthil,

Because the source footage is coming from a DJI Osmo, I'd make the first test about editing judgment, not volume.

I'd take one strong raw clip and make three finished versions from it: a refined Reel, a carousel built from still frames, and a tighter TikTok cut. Keep the colours, typography, and overall feel consistent, but change the opening line and pace for each place it will run.

That would show whether the creator can protect the clean, premium aesthetic while still adapting the same material for different viewing habits.
