

23 September

Hi Sam,

I'd start by turning the profile and bio audit into one approved wording sheet before planning the month's posts.

That sheet should hold the exact description, member and certification figures, register wording, course wording, and the phrases you won't use around contested technical topics. Then every bio, clip caption, homeowner post, and first reply to criticism can be checked against the same source.

It fits your first job, and it would keep publishing moving without asking experts to re-approve the same basic claims each time.

Allen