Hi Tina,

I'd make the first pilot decision rule about evidence before choosing the final automation stack.

For each of the 100 to 200 creator URLs, I'd require one saved source for the channel, one saved source for the contact, and a separate pass or fail note for whether the website clearly belongs to that creator.

That fits your "not found" requirement. It gives reviewers a fast way to approve good records, reject weak identity matches, and keep missing evidence out of the outreach drafts.
