Hi Anthony,

You already named the core issue: some of the lead flow works, but too many leads reaching the phone team are not serious buyers.

My plain opinion is that this should be judged from the CRM and sales outcomes first, then the ad accounts. A cheap form fill is not useful if it never turns into a real buyer conversation.

The page below covers how I would diagnose Google, Meta, creative, landing pages, messaging, and the next three tests without turning this into a generic ad-management pitch.
