Hi Andrew,

SMILE. The real pressure seems to be after the camera stops: a heavy shoot turns into footage notes, editor handoffs, titles, chapters, CTA checks, scheduling, and founder approvals.

I think the coordinator role works only if the system is tight enough that fewer decisions bounce back to the practicing dentist. What I cannot know from the post is where the current handoff breaks most often.

The live page covers the workflow, costs, proof, and a short plan for content operations and creator outreach. The short plan is below this note.
