Hi George,

You were clear that the avatar cannot front the flagship content, and that the narrow job is corner-overlay reactions, language versions, and disposable paid-ad variants.

I agree with the constraint. If your face and voice are the product, the build has to start from your own recorded read, real reference footage, and the exact places the failed attempts broke.

The page lays out how I would structure the paid trial, the pipeline build, the QA points, and the handoff so your team can run it after delivery.
