Hi Rosie,

I'd make the first setup decision about registration quality by event, not only cost per registration.

Because Birmingham, Manchester, London, and Dublin each have Nursing and Allied Health audiences, I'd tag every Eventbrite registration by city, audience, ad set, and creative angle before spend starts. Then the weekly readout can separate cheap signups from people who look like real candidates for that specific event.

That also gives you a cleaner starting point for the longer path you named: registration, attendance, qualified candidate, and eventual placement.
