Hi Gueye-Weinstein,

I'd compare one menopause-care journey with one insured-gynecology journey, tracking how many inquiries from each path book a consultation. That would show whether the two services need different entry points or follow-up before deciding where paid acquisition makes sense.

Your post calls for finding the lowest-cost, highest-converting opportunities first. I'd bring that comparison to a bi-weekly leadership meeting so the next channel decision is based on which path is turning inquiries into consultations.
