Hi Omar,

I'd compare each product's daily sales with its gross margin before deciding what to feature or promote. That would help Dubailist.com avoid giving more attention to a product that sells well but contributes less to profitability.

For the first review, I'd pick one product and check its sales, margin, and ad spend together, then decide whether to feature it more prominently or change its offer. Your brief makes profitable daily sales the goal, so that comparison gives the merchandising decision a clear commercial reason.
